Every tradition that ever engineered a mind used structure. None of them gave you the schematic.

Repetition. Emotional anchoring. Trigger installation. The operators who shape belief at scale — advertisers, propagandists, hypnotists, the priesthoods of every era — have never worked in prose. They work in structure, and the structure has a circuit diagram.

This book draws it. The candle is a resistor. The sigil is an idea impressed into a capacitor. The incantation is a rhythm oscillator. From the Cognitive Junction Transistor forward, it builds nine complete boards: desire operations, hyperstition engines, Overton progression, deprogramming, hypnosis, advertising, information-operation defence, and self-programming.

Every coercive board is drawn for detection and reversal, and every one ends with its counter-circuit. The last chapter is the Cognitive Safety Board, and it is not optional. Read this and the next advertisement you see will decompose in front of you.
